Urban India is undergoing a rapid transformation, which also encompasses the educational sector. Since 1991, this important new market in private English-medium schools, along with an explosion of private coaching centres, has transformed the lives of children and their families, as the attainment of the best education nurtures the aspirations of a growing number of Indian citizens. Set in urban Kerala, the book discusses changing educational landscapes in the South Indian city of Kochi, a local hub for trade, tourism, and cosmopolitan middle-class lifestyles. Based on extensive ethnographic fieldwork, the author examines the way education features as a major way the transformation of the city, and India in general, are experienced and envisaged by upwardly-mobile residents. Schooling is shown to play a major role in urban lifestyles, with increased privatisation representing a response to the educational strategies of a growing and heterogeneous middle class, whose educational choices reflect broader projects of class formation within the context of religious and caste diversity particular to the region. This path-breaking new study of a changing Indian middle class and new relationships with educational institutions contributes to the growing body of work on the experiences and meanings of schooling for youths, their parents, and the wider community and thereby adds a unique, anthropologically informed, perspective to South Asian studies, urban studies and the study of education.

Those Who Can't, Teach turns the spotlight on the madcap lives of teachers and students in a typical secondary school in Singapore. As the teachers struggle daily to nurture and groom, the students prefer to hang out and "chillax". With upskirting and Facebooking, griping and politicking, school takes on a whole new meaning as the colourful characters struggle to prove that those who can, teach. Written by Singapore's most prolific playwright Haresh Sharma, Those Who Can't, Teach was first staged by The Necessary Stage in 1990 to critical acclaim. Twenty years later, Sharma revisits this classic to revitalise it for the Singapore Arts Festival 2010, transforming it into a powerful portrayal of the pressures and challenges facing teachers (and students) in schools in the 21st century.

Today teachers are facing enormous challenges in handling students, to teach effectively and produce results. Parenting has changed over the years with parents tending to give in more to their child's needs and demands. The author believes that this could lead to children taking freedom for granted as too much information is available to children and they may misinterpret things. In this scenario, a teacher's role is critical. The advent of technology demands frequent and continuous update by teachers as often students are more updated on current affairs. Teachers face many additional problems such as being underpaid, dealing with students from different financial backgrounds, difficult student attitudes and so on. This book is a self-help book to help enhance the capabilities of teachers and to help them create a transformed society. It predominantly focuses on enhancing the capability of teachers. Teachers can make a difference in the way they handle students help in moulding and transforming students to create responsible, knowledgeable and humble future generations.

Children are naturally inquisitive and eager to explore and learn about the world around them. It is important for their guardians, both Parents and Teachers, to satisfy their queries, and that too, in such a way that the children are able to understand and comprehend the concepts as well as learn from them. Also, there exists a gap in the level of information and knowledge provided to the children by the Parents vs. that provided by their Teachers. Discrepancies might also exist in the methodology(ies) through which the information and knowledge is relayed. This increases the possibility that the children might either not understand the concept clearly or become confused about the correct interpretation of the concepts. With these objectives in mind, and to build connectivity between the teaching methodologies by Parents and Teachers, we at Oswaal Books, have come up with this Manual for Teachers and Parents. Some benefits of using this manual are: • It aims to aid the Teachers and Parents in simplifying the concepts studied by children as a part of their curriculum • It equips the parents and teachers to enable the children to understand the subjects, and also evaluate their measure of understanding and creativity. • It includes Learning and Understanding Aids along with a Lesson Plan for each Chapter • It demonstrates Effective Teaching Techniques • It also gives various Propositions for Step-wise Learning and Building up of Concepts
