The 9 essays collected in this volume are the result of a workshop for international doctoral and postdoctoral researchers in

Old Norse-Icelandic Saga Studies held at the Institute for Nordic Philology (LMU) in Munich in December 2018. The contributors focus on ›unwanted‹, illicit, neglected, and marginalised elements in saga literature and research on it. The chapters cover a wide range of intra-textual phenomena, narrative strategies, and understudied aspects of individual texts and subgenres. The analyses demonstrate the importance of deviance and transgression as literary characteristics of saga narration, as well as the discursive parameters that have been dominant in Saga Studies. The aim of this collection is to highlight the productiveness of developing modified methodological approaches to the sagas and their study, with a starting point in narratological considerations.

What do medieval Icelanders mean when they say ǫtroll? What did they see when they saw a troll? What did the troll signify to them? And why did they see them? The principal subject of this book is the Norse idea of the troll, which the author uses to engage with the larger topic of paranormal experiences in the medieval North. The texts under study are from 13th-, 14th-, and 15th-century Iceland. The focus of the book is on the ways in which paranormal experiences are related and defined in these texts and how those definitions have framed and continue to frame scholarly interpretations of the paranormal. The book is partitioned into numerous brief chapters, each with its own theme. In each case the author is not least concerned with how the paranormal functions within medieval society and in the minds of the individuals who encounter and experience it and go on to narrate these experiences through intermediaries. The author connects the paranormal encounter closely with fears and these fears are intertwined with various aspects of the human experience including gender, family ties, and death. The Troll Inside You hovers over the boundaries of scholarship and literature. Its aim is to prick and provoke but above all to challenge its audience to reconsider some of their preconceived ideas about the medieval past.

As the global banking boom of the early twenty-first century expanded towards implosion, Icelandic media began calling the country's celebrity financiers útrásarvíkingar: "raiding vikings." This new coinage encapsulated the macho, medievalist nationalism which underwrote Iceland's exponential financialisation. Yet within a few days in October 2008, Iceland saw all its main banks collapse beneath debts worth nearly ten times the country's GDP. Hall charts how Icelandic novelists and poets grappled with the Crash over the ensuing decade. As the first English-language monograph devoted to twenty-first-century Icelandic literature, it provides Anglophone readers with an introduction to one of the world's liveliest literary scenes. It also contributes a key case study for understanding global artistic responses to the early twenty-first century crisis of runaway, unregulated capitalism, exploring the struggles of writers to adapt realist forms of art to surreal times. As Iceland's biggest crisis since their independence from Denmark in 1944, the effect of the Crash on the national self-image was as seismic as its effects on the economy. This study analyses the centrality of whiteness and the abjection of the “developing world” in Iceland's post-colonial identity, and shows how Crash-writing explores the collisions of Iceland's traditional, nationalist medievalism with a dystopian, Orientalist medievalism associated with the Islamic world. The Crash in Iceland was instantly recognised as offering important economic insights. This book shows how Iceland also helps us to understand the cultural convulsions that have followed the Financial Crisis widely in the West. Varronianus: a Critical and Historical Introduction to the Ethnography of Ancient Italy and to the Philological Study of the Latin Language Teach Yourself

Studies in the Vocabulary of the Old Norse Elucidarium BRILL

Poetry. Translated from the Swedish by Jennifer Hayashida. "This vital book exposes the dense tectonics churning beneath migrant dreams. Accusatory, loving, full of grief and sage truths, Athena Farrokhzad's WHITE BLIGHT speaks eloquently to the troubled inheritance of diasporic survival. Through a litany of terse voices, Jennifer Hayashida's sensitive translation describes the nexus of filial obligations and projections under which the narrator sinks from view. The intense beauty of devastation and the poignancy of betrayal emerge with startling frankness: 'Your family will never be resurrected like roses after a fire.' 'I have spent a fortune for your piano lessons / But at my funeral you will refuse to play.' These white lines make me ask, what has been bleached out in all of our stories? I read this book, and I remembered my humanity." Sueyeun Juliette Lee Translator bio: Poet, translator and visual artist Jennifer Hayashida was born in Oakland, CA, and grew up in the suburbs of Stockholm and San Francisco. Agnes y Ómar se conocen una gélida madrugada en el centro de Reikiavik. Tres años después, Ómar reduce su casa a cenizas y abandona el país. Pero esta historia comienza mucho antes, en 1941, cuando la mitad de los habitantes de la ciudad lituana de Jurbarkas son asesinados en un bosque de los alrededores. Dos de los bisabuelos de Agnes estuvieron en esa masacre —uno disparó al otro— y, tres generaciones después, Agnes ha convertido el Holocausto y los populismos xenófobos en el centro absoluto de su vida. Y su obsesión la lleva hasta Arnor, un neonazi cultivado... Traducida a siete idiomas y celebrada unánimemente por la crítica, Illska se sitúa en el corazón de la actual crisis de valores europea y explora, a través de un argumento adictivo, la

FOURTEENTH-CENTURY ICELANDIC VERSE ON THE VIRGIN MARY The five skaldic poems in this volume are among the finest examples of medieval literature composed in the vernacular in honour of the Virgin Mary. They are part of an extensive corpus of Old Icelandic Marian texts which is significant not merely for its size, but, more importantly, for its contribution to our understanding of the cult of the Virgin in Western Europe. Dated to the late fourteenth century, the lamentation poem Drapa of Mariugrat and the miracle poems Vitnisvisur of Mariu and Mariuisur I-III are among the earliest extant evidence of Old Icelandic Marian poetry. There has been no lack of attention paid to these texts by scholarly editors publishing in languages other than English, from Jon Porkelsson's Danish edition of fragments of the poems in 1888, to Bernhard Kahle and Hans Sperber's German editions in 1898 and 1911 respectively, through to Finnur Jonsson's Danish edition and translation in 1912-15 and Ernst A. Kock's Swedish edition in 1946-49. While valuable in their particular ways - for instance, both Kahle and Sperber discuss the metrical features in detail - these editions have not addressed the main issues associated with this group of Marian vernacular poems. These five skaldic poems, for example, have never been edited as a set on their own, separate from other religious poetry, yet, like so much Marian literature, especially the miracles, these Old Icelandic texts lend themselves to such treatment. Nor did any of the past editions include a glossary for these texts, which contain many words and phrases associated with the Mary cult and the monastic culture in which they appear to have been composed. Perhaps most significantly, no attempt was made by the past editors to place these poems in a broader European context, to trace at least some of the source texts which make up the textual history of Drapa af Mariugrat, Vitnisvisur af Mariu and Mariuvisur I-III, and to find a legitimate place for this Old Icelandic contribution in the cult of the Virgin across Western Europe. The present edition aims to fill these needs by providing a reliable and accessible text of the five poems, while the editor is planning to publish more comprehensive studies of the sources and analogues in article form, and is also completing a new critical edition with English translations and commentary of some of the related miracle stories about the Virgin Mary in medieval Icelandic prose (see pp. xx and x below).

 Événement dans l'histoire mondiale : Agnes Lukauskaite et Omar Arnarson se rencontrent par un dimanche matin glacial dans la queue des taxis au centre-ville de Reykjavik. Trois ans plus tard, Omar brûle entièrement leur maison, conduit jusqu'à Keflavík et quitte le pays en avion. L'histoire commence en réalité bien avant, au cours de l'été 1941, quand la moitié des habitants d'une petite ville lituanienne, Jurbarkas, sont massacrés dans la forêt alentour. Deux arrière-grands-pères d'Agnes participent au massacre - l'un d'eux tue l'autre - et trois générations plus tard Agnes met l'Holocauste au cœur de sa vie. Son obsession l'amène à rencontrer Arnor, un néonazi cultivé. Illska parle d'Holocauste et d'amour, d'Islande et de Lituanie, d'Agnes qui se perd en elle-même alors que l'ambassadeur d'Islande en Lituanie reconnaît l'indépendance des pays baltes et que des criminels lituaniens commencent à opérer depuis Reykjavik, d'Agnes qui ne sait pas qui est le père de son enfant ni si elle veut finir sa thèse sur l'extrême droite islandaise ou chater avec son amant néonazi, d'Agnes qui aime Omar qui aime Agnes qui aime Arnor. La lecture de ce texte déclenche une jubilation aussi intellectuelle que sensuelle, due autant aux fulgurances de la pensée qu'à la maîtrise impeccable de la langue et de la narration. Illska est un livre surprenant et immense écrit par un homme jeune, mais qui est appelé à devenir un grand, sans doute un très grand écrivain. "Voici sans le moindre doute le livre le plus inhabituel de la rentrée : un Islandais nommé Eiríkur Örn Norddahl a réussi à écrire un roman qui rassemble sous le même toit l'Holocauste, la crise économique, la montée des néonazis en Europe et un triangle amoureux d'une franchise étonnante." - Profile, Allemagne "Illska, Le Mal, est une conversation claire avec le présent. Norddahl est un vrai génie. Il n'y a pas un temps mort dans le texte. En tant qu'ouvre politique Illska est un pur chef-d'oeuvre. " dv Daily " Eiríkur Örn Norddahl a écrit un livre cruel et parfois cruellement drôle sur la façon dont l'idéologie et l'histoire imprègnent nos sphères les plus intimes. C'est Illska." - Spiegel online, Allemagne "Avec ce livre, Norddahl s'est fait une place parmi les auteurs les plus audacieux et progressistes de sa génération." - Vidsja, National Broadcasting service "Tellement maîtrisé, original et cool que ça en est effrayant." - Frettabladid Daily, Islande Eiríkur Örn Norddahl est né à Reykjavik en 1978 et a grandi à Isafjordur. Il a commencé à écrire vers 2000, mais la nécessité l'a amené à faire d'autres choses pour gagner sa vie. Il a vécu à Berlin en 2002-2004 puis dans plusieurs pays d'Europe du Nord, en particulier à Helsinki (2006-2009) et en Finlande (2009-2011) et dernièrement au Viêtnam. En 2004 il a été un des membres fondateurs du collectif poétique d'avant-garde Nyhil, en Islande. En 2008, il a reçu le Icelandic Translators Award pour sa traduction du roman de Jonathan Lethem, Les Orphelins de Brooklyn. Il a obtenu une mention

Honorable au Zebra Poetry Film Festival de Berlin en 2010 pour son animation poétique, Höpöhöpö Böks. En 2012 Norddahl a reçu le Icelandic Literary Prize, catégorie fiction et poésie, ainsi que le Book Merchants' Prize pour son roman Illska. Viking America examined through the writing and rewriting of the Vinland story from the middle ages to the twentieth century. The accounts in the Vinland sagas of the great voyages to the northeast coast of America in the early years of the eleventh century have often been obscured by detailed argument over the physical identity of the West Atlantic land which its Scandinavian discoverers named Vinland. Geraldine Barnes leaves archaeological evidence aside and returns to the Old Norse narratives, Groenlendinga saga (Saga of Greenlanders) and Eiriks saga rauda (Saga of Eric the Red), in her study of the writing and rewriting of the Vinland story from the middle ages to the late twentieth century. She sets the sagas in the context of Iceland's transition from paganism to Christianity; later chapters explore the Vinland story in relation to issues of regional pride and national myths of foundation in nineteenth- and early twentieth-century America, to the ethos of popular imperialism during the same period in English literature, and, in the late twentieth century, to postcolonial concerns. GERALDINE BARNES is associate professor of English, University of Sydney.
