In making decisions about college, it is essential that students and parents focus on net price, which is the dollar amount that must be paid after subtracting financial assistance from cost of attendance. A net price calculator is one of two financial aid tools designed to provide students and parents with accurate and timely information about the net price of a particular college, or type of college. A well-designed calculator can provide an early estimate of cost of attendance and financial aid long before application for admission. A second tool--a financial aid award letter--provides a list of the financial aid an admitted student will likely receive, once enrolled. While used at different points in the decision making process, these tools are often closely related from a student and parent perspective. The closer a net price calculator approximates the dollar amounts that are likely to appear in the financial aid award letter, issued once the student has been admitted, the more useful it is in the decision making process. In the "Higher Education Opportunity Act" of 2008, Congress included two new requirements aimed at ensuring students and parents are provided with the data they need to make sound decisions. To ensure broad availability of net price calculators, Congress directed the Department of Education to develop a template as guidance, and required each institution to make its own version available on its website by fall 2011. To encourage greater standardization of financial aid award letters, Congress also directed the Department to develop a model financial aid award letter as guidance for institutions. On March 17, 2011, the Advisory Committee held its spring hearing in Washington DC, and devoted two panels to a discussion of issues associated with net price calculators and financial aid award letters. The first panel included researchers and analysts; the second panel included practitioners. After providing background, this report presents a transcript of those two panels, highlighting notable passages. Overall, the following consensus emerged from the panel discussions: (1) Students and parents need accurate and timely information about both college expenses and financial aid from middle school through college enrollment and persistence; (2) The current status of financial aid award letters--in particular, the lack of comparability from institution to institution--provides a cautionary tale for the future of net price calculators; and (3) While net price calculators have the potential to be useful tools for students and parents, they are likely to suffer from several limitations that warrant further examination. Appended are: (1) March 17 Hearing Panelists; (2) ACSFA (Advisory Committee on Student Financial Assistance) Members; (3) ACSFA Staff; and (4) ACSFA Authorizing Legislation. A list of resources is included.

This document collects information on potential sources of financial and related support for environmental projects undertaken by NATO Cooperation Partners (Partnership for Peace nations) in Central and Eastern Europe and the Former Soviet Union. The sources listed include U.S. government agencies; organizations of the European Union; international financial institutions, such as the World Bank Group and the Asian Development Bank; bilateral funding agencies, such as the U.S.-Japan Environmental Initiative; multilateral sources like the Nordic Development Fund; and private Investment funds. In addition, the listing contains various foundations, non-profit organizations, and corporate grant programs plus a collection of miscellaneous investment funds that may be willing to support restoration initiatives. The organizations listed have had the opportunity to review their entry and, while not committing themselves to providing funding, most have expressed a willingness to consider well-presented proposals. Also in the document are appendixes with specific guidelines on making application for financial assistance, sample letters of inquiry, and a proposal format that may be useful for submission to foundations, trusts, investment funds, or other potential investors.

College financial aid is not like negotiating with a car dealership, where bluff and bluster will get you a bigger, better deal. Appealing for more financial aid depends on presenting the college financial aid office with adequate documentation of special circumstances that affect the family's ability to pay for college. This book provides a guide for students and their families on how to appeal for more financial aid for college and how to improve the likelihood of a successful appeal. This book also discusses techniques for increasing eligibility for need-based financial aid and merit aid. The topics covered by this book include corrections, updates, special circumstances, writing an effective financial aid appeal letter, adequate documentation, professional judgment adjustments, unusual circumstances, dependency overrides and the differences between the FAFSA and CSS Profile forms.

The Bottom Line Harper Collins
Soon after its declaration of independence, Lithuania launched a program of market-based economic reforms that achieved remarkable results. However, a banking crisis erupted in January 1996, driven by a combination of ineffective bank supervision, poor bank practices, and deep-rooted sectoral imbalances. With financial support from the World Bank, Lithuanian authorities embarked on a broad economic reform program with two immediate objectives: the resolution of the banking system's operational and undercapitalization problems, and a reduction in the most severe imbalances in the economy. Volume I (see ordering information below) distills findings and conclusions and builds a policy action plan for fast stable growth. Volume II contains a collection of twelve policy notes that provide the technical analysis behind that plan. Also available: Volume II/Analytical Background (ISBN 0-8213-4327-0) Stock no. 14327.

Collection Manual

Updated to include changes in financial aid as a result of landmark new legislation passed in fall 2007, Peterson's Paying for College, provides parents and students with straight, easy-to-understand answers to the most frequently asked questions about financial aid. While most competitive books make unrealistic promises that they'll help you go to college for free, this book takes a more practical approach, recognizing that most American families will have to navigate the financial aid process and pay for college in some way. As college costs continue to rise and borrowing becomes more difficult for many families, this book is particularly timely.

Student Financial Assistance Programs

The educational and living costs of undergraduate studies and the ways these costs are shared among parents, students, taxpayers, and philanthropists/donors are considered for five countries: the United States, the United Kingdom, the Federal Republic of Germany, France, and Sweden. Five policy issues that are linked to how costs are shared by parents, students, and the general taxpayer are identified, including the participation in higher education by low-income and other previously excluded groups. The five country profiles and comparative analysis consider: the out-of-pocket costs faced by students and parents; the expected parental contribution, if any, and how it is derived; the expected student contribution, from savings, work, or loans; the taxpayer-borne contribution (e.g., need-based grants, loan subsidies); trends and issues regarding the sharing of higher education costs within each country; problems or issues common to all five countries; and each country's structure and governance of higher education. Appended materials describe the concept of "purchasing power parity," as well as concepts for separating subsidized loans into a "true loan" and an "effective grant." (SW)
