Design and customize fabulous looks with colored pencils, markers, crayons, even real makeup! The importance of face charts - Communication is key -- Especially in makeup artistry, where you are literally up in someone's face. One of the most trusted but often overlooked tools of communication as a makeup artist is the basic face chart that lets you plan out your look and propose it to clients before you get your hands on them. Makeup face charts are a basic line drawing of a face printed on paper that absorbs color well, allowing you to make a mock up of your actual makeup application. They are perfect for a photo shoot or bridal trial, but also can be used as a guideline for color inspiration, application placement, or communication of a design or desired look to any client or team of makeup artists. Face charts can also be a great archiving tool to help you keep track of all the products and color combinations that were used on an assignment. They are a wonderful, visual way to make notes for yourself on your application so you can make it amazing every time. Some basic tips for developing your own face chart: Don't worry about coloring in the complexion of a face on your chart. Make notes to keep track of your foundation and concealer product. For the best results, use watercolor or resume paper. Standard printer paper may be too shiny and slick to allow the color to set properly. Highly pigmented eye shadow or powder product work best for depositing color and allowing blendability. Use your makeup brushes or art brushes to deposit color. Small firm, dense brushes work best to apply and blend the color on the chart. Pencils and gel liners are ideal for lining and defining. Liquid liner works well for creating eyelashes. Set your face chart with hair spray for transfer-proof permanence. The face chart can become much more than just a client-based tool. It can become a canvas for expression and an outlet for creativity. Makeup Charts
